FY27 guide missed on revenue as management resets Tax and low-end QBO pricing to rebuild customer growth. EPS guide strong on cost cuts. Execution risk is high and unproven until Tax quarter in May. Stock is cheap at ~14x CY27 EPS, but we stay EW pending proof of execution against the reset guide.

Updated Growth Algorithm Creates a Lot of Uncertainty. FY26 results were solid, with revenue growth of 14% modestly above guidance, Global Business Solutions Group (GBSG) growth of 16% in line with guidance, Consumer growth of 11% (~100bps ahead of guidance), and non-GAAP EPS of $24.27 (~2 points above midpoint). However, FY27 guidance was below expectations on the top line, with revenue growth of +9%-10% vs consensus at 11%, GBSG growth of 13-14% (~2% below consensus), Consumer growth of +4%-6% vs consensus at +7-8%, and TurboTax growth of +2%-3%, well below expectations for +5-6%. The bottom-line guide came in strong as anticipated, with non-GAAP EPS of $28.69-$28.93 (after adding back the disclosed $5.81 SBC impact) implying ~19% YoY growth and ~5% above Street. This outperformance is largely tied to savings from the 17% workforce reduction announced last quarter, continued efficiency gains, and lower share count, partly offset by reinvestment into sales, marketing, and product innovation. Management attributed the weaker revenue outlook to a deliberate reset toward customer acquisition and market share, which includes lower DIY pricing after losing quality DIY customers to low-cost providers, a renewed focus on low-end QuickBooks through Free and Lite offerings, Desktop migration pressure, and a more balanced contribution from volume, mix, and price. The key uncertainty is whether lower entry pricing and higher customer acquisition investment can restore DIY tax and low-end QBO customer growth without structurally impairing ARPC or the long-term growth algorithm. As we mentioned in our preview, management lowered its medium-term growth guidance and is now forecasting GBSG revenue to grow at a 10%-15% CAGR over the next three years (down from 15%-20%) and Consumer to grow at a 4%-8% CAGR (down from 6-10%). While these lowered bars give the company flexibility while it shifts attention back to customer growth, the burden of proof remains high as investors wait for evidence FY27 marks a trough year or the start of a lower growth algorithm.

Shift in Tax Strategy Stokes the Bear Case and Presents Execution Risk. The biggest strategic change was in TurboTax (TT), where management acknowledged the DIY growth model built on pricing and upgrades has become less effective as lower-cost providers pressure the top-of-the-funnel. This shift is reflected in FY27 TurboTax guidance of only +2%-3%, well below expectations for +5%-6%, as Intuit plans to improve the price-value equation through lower DIY tax pricing to win back quality customers and rebuild DIY market share. The new strategy is to forego some pricing on the initial TurboTax filing and to monetize more with Credit Karma (CK) as TT + CK customers generate ~2x the ARPC of single-product customers. However, the pivot also validates the bear case around low-end DIY pressure and creates more uncertainty about the path forward, especially with TurboTax Live expected to slow to mid-teens growth in FY27 from +37% in FY26 as DIY upgrades moderate after contributing more than three-quarters of Live customer additions this year. Growth in Assisted Tax now needs to come increasingly from new-to-franchise customers, supported by broader distribution through LLM experiences, payroll partnerships, and local outreach. While this strategic pivot is likely the right long-term move for better customer growth, it increases execution risk as investors wait for proof lower pricing can restore DIY share without structurally impairing ARPC or the Consumer growth algorithm.

Low-End Disruption Spreading to Global Business Solutions Is Likely Overblown.

While the expectations reset deservedly raises questions around low-end QuickBooks customer growth, concerns around low-end disruption spreading into Global Business Solutions looks overblown. The urgency to reignite top-of-funnel growth should not overshadow the momentum Intuit is seeing upselling customers into higher-value offerings and expanding its mid-market base, as evidenced by FY26 GBSG growth of 16% YoY (18% ex-Mailchimp), QBO Accounting growth of +23% YoY, and Online Services growth of +24% ex-Mailchimp. Further, Mid-Market remains the clearest proof point, with revenue +39% YoY, customers growing +28% YoY, new-to-franchise mid-market customers growing +30%+, and IES annualized revenue surpassing $145M in Q4, up ~4x YoY. Lastly, services attach strength remains durable, with the Online Money portfolio growing +31% YoY, total online payment volume including Bill Pay +30%+ YoY, and QBO Advanced customers showing materially higher payroll and payments penetration than core QBO customers. Furthermore, most of the customer slowdown is concentrated in Mailchimp vs. core QBO as QBO customers ex-Self Employed grew 6% YoY vs total online paying customers only growing 3%. Net, the key debate in GBS likely focuses less on AI-native entrants structurally disrupting QuickBooks (see Mid-Market ERP Disruption: Who Is Best Positioned to Capture Share?) and more on the execution needed to rebuild low-end customer growth while continuing to monetize higher-value customers through QBO Advanced, IES, Money, and Payroll.

What To Do With the Stock? Although the lowered FY27 guide and medium-term outlook have reignited investor concerns of a decelerating growth algorithm, we believe this reset creates a more achievable bar for Intuit to step over in the coming quarters. With that said, we are incrementally cautious around the execution risks embedded in the new strategy. The added uncertainty, coupled with the lack of visibility into the success of this turnaround until Intuit's F3Q in May, is likely a challenging road ahead for shares until investors can more confidently underwrite a durable reacceleration. With shares trading ~14x CY27 GAAP EPS, well below large-cap peers in the high teens / low twenties, we believe the stock offers a solid risk/reward skew, but remain EW until we see greater evidence of execution against the reset guide.

PT to $315. Given the execution risks and lower growth expectations mentioned above, we lower our forward-year multiple down to 14x from 15x prior. Our new $315 PT (from $335 previously) is based on CY27 GAAP EPS of $22.62 and a 14x multiple, or 0.8x growth adjusted, well below Large-Cap Software peers.

EQUAL-WEIGHT THESIS

While Intuit is in the early days of two compelling product cycles in Mid-Market Accounting and Assisted Tax, we point to three key risks that keep us Equal-weight: 1) Tax Overhang, 2) Upcoming FY27 Guide in Likely a Lose-Lose Situation, and 3) AI Not Inflecting Growth Yet. Despite Intuit's durable double digit revenue and mid-teens EPS growth not fully being priced in with the stock trading well below large cap peers.

STOCK RATINGS

Morgan Stanley uses a relative rating system using terms such as Overweight, Equal-weight, Not-Rated or Underweight (see definitions below). Morgan Stanley does not assign ratings of Buy, Hold or Sell to the stocks we cover. Overweight, Equal-weight, Not-Rated and Underweight are not the equivalent of buy, hold and sell. Investors should carefully read the definitions of all ratings used in Morgan Stanley Research. In addition, since Morgan Stanley Research contains more complete information concerning the analyst's views, investors should carefully read Morgan Stanley Research, in its entirety, and not infer the contents from the rating alone. In any case, ratings (or research) should not be used or relied upon as investment advice. An investor's decision to buy or sell a stock should depend on individual circumstances (such as the investor's existing holdings) and other considerations.

Global Stock Ratings Distribution
